THIRTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

The House then proceeded to the consideration of the amendments of the Senate to the bill making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the government for the ensuing fiscal year, reported yesterday from the Committee of the Whole, with the recommendation that some of the amendments be concurred in and others non-concurred in.

The first amendment, providing for the payment of the mileage of the newly-elected members of the Senate in attendance at the called executive session, commencing on the 4th of March, 1857, was not agreed to —yeas 36, nays 123.

The second and third amendments, making slight reduction in the salaries of the officers of the Senate, were concurred in.

Mr. MARSHALL, of Kentucky, moved that the vote be better prepared at the next session to act than now, and appealed to the House to vote down the proposition to postpone, and proceed to its consideration now.

The question was then taken, and the motion to postpone was not agreed to—yeas 36, nays 167.

Mr. BURNETT hoped the report would be postponed until next Tuesday, so that they could in the mean time take up the appropriation bills and send them to the Senate. He therefore made a motion to that effect.

No objection being made, the motion was agreed to.

THE NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

On motion of Mr. J. GLANGY JONES, the usual resolution terminating debate on the naval appropriation bill in five minutes after its consideration should be resumed was adopted.

The House then went into Committee of the Whede on the state of the Union, (Mr. Sickles, of New York, in the chair,) and resumed the consideration of the bill making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending since 39, 1859.

Mr. J. GLANGY JONES explained the provisions of the bill. He said that the gross amount appropriated was $13,149,544 23, which was a reduction of the estimates to the extent of several hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. BOCCCK, of Virginia, urged the propriety of constructing ten new steam sloops of war. He carriestly advocated the adoption of measures that would promote the efficiency of the navy, and said that if the government did not build new vessels, those now in the service would soon go to decay, and the navy would become inefficient.

A number of amendments were offered, several of

He did not see why they should pay millions for the army, millions for the rawy, millions for the legislation of the country, and pay nothing for this branch of the public service, which came more directly home to the people, and in the benefits of which they more generally participated.

On motion of Mr. WASHBURNE, of Illinois, the committee rose for the purpose of closing debate on the bill.

Mr. J. GLANCY JONES demanded the previous question on the naval appropriation bill, and the bill making appropriations for the collection of the revenue, reported from the committee with a favorable recommendation; which was ordered.

The House then adjourned.
